TEST SENTIMENT OF VICTORY FOR PINCHOT CRITICS

Assembly Happy Over Definite Steps Toward Unemployment Relief

LONG BICKERING

Both Houses to Reconvene Monday, Fortified by Home Folks' Approval

By Staff Correspondent
HARRISBURG, Dec. 10.—(INS)—Happily conscious they had moved definitely toward unemployment relief, members of the General Assembly today returned to their home districts to test sentiment of the home electorate on the temporary victory gained by critics of Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

"After four weeks of fruitless bickering, House and Senate pushed toward enactment relief measures directly opposed to the plans outlined by the Governor when he convened the special session. Whether the legislators would attempt to override a gubernatorial veto, which is practically certain to greet the measures on final passage, is conjectural.

Both houses will reconvene Monday night fortified by the knowledge their opposition program is approved by the "folks back home"—or, if the approval is not forthcoming, in a somewhat chastened mood.

A badly stampered house that bolted the Governor's standard on Tuesday and maintained its truculent attitude yesterday is expected to make a gesture toward approving, in part, some of the Governor's proposals to avoid the charge of "playing politics with human misery."

Two of the Governor's original schemes, the gasoline tax and the prosperity bond issue, are expected to pass in amended form in the House where, political observers believe, members were carried away in a wave of resentment against the Governor far beyond their original intentions.

One House leader, an administration supporter, said he believed Governor Pinchot would emerge from the present fight in a stronger position than before. He added:

"In attempting to crucify Pinchot, the House has allowed itself to be crucified. Members are returning home with full knowledge that no taxation plan which would aid the unemployed of the state as a whole have been pushed toward enactment. The pendulum is now swinging the other way—in the Governor's favor."

The amended one-cent gasoline tax bill, sponsored by Rep. Bart Richards, Lawrence, was shunted to the postponed calendar when the anti-Pinchot stampede was at its height. Later, when a House group decided to safeguard itself by calling the bill up for a vote, they were faced with a parliamentary barrier—only under unanimous consent, could they recall the bill.

Passage of the measure is forecast for Monday night and it is believed the bill will safely navigate the Senate.

Strong reports were heard today that the executive's "prosperity bond" issue likewise would be given a helping hand by all factions. It was believed, however, that the original total of $25,000,000 would be reduced to $15,000,000.

DIDN'T WANT LOOT

(By "The Stroller")
Someone on Tuesday night broke open a freight car on the P. R. R. siding at Taft street with the intentions, no doubt, of getting hams and a supply of other smoked meats for the winter season.

After the door had been forced open the thief or thieves found the car loaded with something but they knew not what. It later proved to be a carload of pancreas glands from the Armour Company in Chicago.

It is needless to say that the contents were undisturbed.

ACQUITTED OF STEALING A BUSHEL OF GRAPES

Bethlehem Resident Walked Into Haycock Township to Steal Fruit

MUST PAY THE COSTS

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 10.—It took a jury but five minutes to acquit Tony Delgrossa, 23, of Bethlehem, who was on trial before Judge Calvin S. Boyer on a charge of stealing some grapes that he picked from vines along the highway on a farm in Haycock township.

The prosecutor in the case was Chief of Police Harry Rhoades, of Quakertown, who arrested Delgrossa on the information of the caretaker of the farm from which the grapes were stolen.

The costs in the case, however, were placed on the defendant by the jury after Judge Boyer had explained to them that if they found that the value of the goods was less than $10 they would have to dispose of the costs in case of an acquittal.

Delgrossa testified that he did pick grapes but when the caretaker of the place walked by and saw him, that he offered to pay him for the grapes but he refused to take the money.

The defendant said that he picked about a bushel of grapes from the "outside" of the fence.

Judge Boyer charged the jury in detail on the two offenses, larceny and receiving stolen goods. The defense counsel, Edward Blester, who was appointed to defend Delgrossa, argued to the jury that the case was so trivial that it should have been settled outside of court.

"You are very lucky," Judge Boyer said to Delgrossa when he sentenced him to pay the costs. "The jury evidently believed that the value of the grapes was less than $10. You men from the cities think that you can come down into the country districts and take anything that is within sight along a highway. The farmers must be protected and have a right to their own produce. The highways are for nothing else but traveling purposes and whether the grapes were on the inside or outside of the fence, made no difference in this case."

The caretaker of the farm had testified that he valued a bushel of grapes at $25.

The Court yesterday appointed J. Leslie Kilcayne, of Bristol, master in the divorce case of Viola V. Grimm against Russell Wills. Webster Grimm, of Doylestown, was appointed master in the divorce case of Catherine Hohlman Arwine against Charles Horace Arwine.

WANTS COMMISSION TO HELP PLAN BRIDGE

Congressman Watson Presents Resolution Calling For Joint Body

EATON TO AID, TOO

In Washington yesterday Congressman Henry W. Watson took steps to create a Federal commission to help New Jersey and Pennsylvania plan a Washington Crossing memorial bridge over the Delaware River. He introduced a resolution providing for such a commission.

The membership would comprise a Senator named by the President of the Senate, a representative selected by the Speaker of the House and a third person chosen by the President.

The cost of the bridge would be shared by the Federal Government and the 13 original States and the commission would be instructed to submit a report to Congress as soon as possible on the plan.

A bridge across the Delaware at Washington Crossing was proposed at the last session of Congress by Representative Eaton, of New Jersey.

Eaton said he would not introduce his measure at this session but would use his efforts to secure approval for the Watson bill.

Although it would be impossible to complete a bridge in time for the Bicentennial celebration of Washington's birth next year, Eaton said he hoped to secure favorable action so construction might be begun during the State-wide ceremonies scheduled in New Jersey.

Few Employees Begin Work At Bristol Patent Leather

Work on a greatly reduced scale was resumed at the Bristol Patent Leather Company's plant here yesterday.

Only a few of the former employees have been given employment and the plant is being operated on a greatly reduced scale of production. There is very little prospect of an increased demand for leather within the immediate future but the firm hopes for improved conditions at a later period.

SS CARS LEAVE RAILS

Altoona, Dec. 10.—More than 400 workers and 5 wreck trains today strove desperately to clear away one of the worst train wrecks in the history of the Pennsylvania Railroad when a train of 88 coal cars left the tracks nine miles west of here. One man is missing and 4 others hurt in the dash of the heavy train down the mountain-side around Bennington Curve. Failure of brakes to work properly is believed by officials of the railroad to have been responsible for the wreck.

STACKHOUSE'S RECORD AS CO. FIRE MARSHAL

Hulmeville Man Has Done Excellent Work in The County Office

HAS MADE 45 ARRESTS

Bucks County has a fire marshal of which she may well feel proud in the person of William L. Stackhouse, of Hulmeville.

More than 45 arrests have been made by Stackhouse in the past six years and he has secured 26 convictions.

So successful has he been in that office that Stackhouse, who was elected in 1920 by the Bucks County Firemen's Association, has been unanimously renominated fire marshal each succeeding year.

Stackhouse first became interested in fire department work in 1907 when he became a charter member of the William Penn Fire Company of Hulmeville. He is still a trustee of that department.

Because of many suspicious fires which broke out in Bucks County, the need for an officer to investigate their causes was recognized by the Bucks Association, and the election of Stackhouse followed.

Stackhouse investigates a suspicious fire until his evidence is almost complete. Then he calls in the State police to make the arrest. So complete is Stackhouse's evidence that confessions are usually forthcoming from persons arrested. The Bucks County marshal declares, however, that his success in tracking down arson bugs is due largely to the co-operation he has received from members of the volunteer fire companies throughout the county.

Marshal Stackhouse has obtained more court convictions than any other fire marshal in Pennsylvania in the past few years. He is the only paid fire marshal in the State, receiving pay for 50 days of work each year, although frequently he actually puts in more than 100 days investigating fires.

Gift Seeker Believes She Can Get More "Kick" Out of X'mas Than Her Grandmother Did—Shops Were Not As Plentiful or As Nice Then

Mother remembers when I stopped at Baylies' Jewelry Store, and ordered two of the larger pieces I heard Betty say that she wanted. Won't she be pleased? It is arranged in such a manner that a stiff handle of about two inches makes it easy to hold while powdering the nose. And then on the end of this handy handle is a ring by which the compact might be completed the array a few weeks ago. That gave me an idea. Little James McCarty, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCarty, of Crofton, was one year old on Tuesday and in the afternoon his parents had a birthday party at their home in his honor.

The little children who gathered at the McCarty home had a good time playing games. Buddy Storms won the prize for the donkey game. Refreshments were served during the afternoon, and the dining room and table were attractively decorated in pink and white. In the center of the table was placed a large birthday cake, decorated with one pink candle.

Those attending the party were: Elmer Storms and son Buddy, of Crofton; Mrs. Lester Johnson and children Jane and Dick of Tullytown; Mr. and Mrs. James Byrne and children Bernice and Helen, and Mrs. Joseph Morrin and children James and Joseph, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. James McCarty and son James, of Crofton.

MOTHER MOORE'S WORK OF CHEER IS TOLD OF

MRS. HEADLEY IN CHAIR

About 50 members and friends of the W. C. T. U. on Tuesday evening at the Travel Club Home enjoyed hearing "Mother Moore" tell of her work of cheer for the soldiers and sailors at the Navy Yard, Grey's Ferry, Fort Mifflin, etc.

While "Uncle Sam" does provide these men with necessary food and clothing, for many of them would be very drab and monotonous without the Christmas cheer and recreation which "Mother Moore" arranges in the way of summer outings, picnics and boat trips.

Christmas week this year during Christmas eve, to gather 800 children of the very poor, who will be given an all day treat by the sailors on the ships in port. There is lively competition between the crews as to which shall entertain the greatest number, some taking 100, some 120, some 150, according to capacity. The children have a royal time with Christmas tree, dinner, games, Punch & Judy show, etc., and each child is given a box of warm clothing to the value of $10, the gift of the sailors.

For the hospital wards there are Christmas trees, candy, fruit, music and entertainment. On Christmas eve groups of carol singers bring their cheer, singing outside each hospital. To help Mother Moore's work, Bristol Union will send as usual, a barrel of apples, 10 pounds hard candy, jelly and fruit, home-made cookies, knitted afghans, and a money donation.

Mother Moore told of the statement by the chaplain, who has been stationed at the Navy Yard 32 years, as to his experience of the greatly improved conditions under the 18th Amendment. Before this law was in effect, she told, sailors on shore leave, while their ships were in port, were ordered to report 48 hours before the ship's sailing time, in order to get their sobered up in time for starting. They were placed during this time in a detention room or "brig" and they were piled up two or three deep. In these days, she added the men are required to report only two hours before sailing time, and come in fit condition. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Mrs. Headley mentioned some clippings from Washington newspapers, sent by Mrs. Manger, reporting the W. C. T. U. Regional Conference held there Dec. 4, 5, 6. On Friday, Dec. 4th, 150 delegates were received by President and Mrs. Hoover, at which time was presented to the chief executive the "Youth's Roll Call" signed by 1,045,089 young people, 14 to 30 years of age, pledging their support and allegiance to the 18th Amendment, proving in the minds of the W. C. T. U. members, that there is a solid substratum of substantial high-minded youth, which may be trusted to save the nation from threatening quackery of lowered standards and the rate which befell the 'glory that was Rome.'

The return of Rev. George F. Hess to the pastorate of the Bristol M. E. Church was requested last night at the fourth quarterly conference held by District Superintendent Albert M. Wither, in the local church.

The motion urged the district superintendent to use his efforts to have Rev. Hess reassigned here at the annual conference which meets in March. Rev. Hess has been here three years.

Committee chairmen and officials of the church reported as to the activities of the church and great progress was shown in all of the affairs of the church.

The membership has been added to and the entire church property has been renovated and numerous improvements made during the pastorate of Rev. Hess.

UNDERPASS AT GREEN LANE IS ABOUT COMPLETE

Thoroughfare Expected to Be Open to Traffic in A Few Weeks

TOOK YEAR'S WORK

Speed of 60 and 70 Miles An Hour Has Been Maintained by Trains

Within the next three weeks the work of eliminating the last grade crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Bristol, will have been completed. The last of the work to be done in the construction of the Green Lane underpass is now underway, and weather permitting will soon be finished, and the underpass opened to traffic. All that remains is the laying of the concrete road-way and sidewalks.

This work which has been in progress more than a year has been a difficult and tedious construction job. It is one of the deepest underpasses on the entire Pennsylvania system, and provides an overhead clearance of 15 feet which is one foot more than the usual clearance of underpasses. Another unusual feature in the work is the fact that during the entire construction period the speed of trains passing over the spot has been maintained at an average of 60 to 70 miles per hour. This is one of the first such jobs completed by the Pennsylvania Company with this speed maintained.

The next step in the improvement of the roadway through Green Lane will be the elimination of the "camel-back" canal bridge. The canal company will lay pipe to carry what water will remain in the canal and then the canal for the width of the roadway will be filled in, and a roadbed constructed. West of the canal Green Lane is to be straightened so that all turns will be what are termed "easy turns" in highway construction parlance.

Before constructing the underpass it was necessary to lay a 24-inch concrete sewer, the full length of Green Lane to the river, so as to drain the water from the undercut.

The public service commission on November 4, 1929, directed construction of the subway and abolition of an eight-track grade crossing at Green Lane. The abolition of the crossing at grade followed a serious accident in which six persons were killed.

The cost of the work was set by the commission at $302,022, including $19,815 in property damages. The commission paid $25,000 of the costs. The Pennsylvania Railroad built the subway and furnished the material. Bucks County pays $18.18 per cent; Bristol borough 7.27 per cent; and Bristol Township 3.64 per cent of the costs.

The under-cut was made one foot deeper than usual to accommodate the airplanes built by the Keystone Aircraft Corporation which are towed from the plant to the Keystone flying field. The Green Lane route affords a short cut to the company's field in Bristol Township.

Surprise Party Given In Honor of John Mulligan

A surprise birthday party was held Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCarty, of Venice avenue, in honor of John Mulligan, whose birthday occurred on Monday.

The guests included: Genevieve Finney, Katharine Armstrong, Rose Flannigan, Mary Joe McGee, Marie Conigle, Grace Murphy, Marie Craven, Helen Doyle, Ruth Blanche, Mary Hoffman, Elizabeth Mariner and Mary Waters; John Mulligan, Joseph Lynn, William Lynn, William Dougherty, John Fitzgerald, Leonard McGee, Joseph Gallagher, George Clark, Francis Nealis, Roy McGinley, Alfred McIlvaine, of Bristol, and Thomas Carmen, of Cornwells Heights.

Mrs. Joseph Peirce, of Mulberry and Cedar streets, was a guest over the week-end of friends in Wissinoming.

GIVING

With the approach of the Christmas season all citizens of Bristol will be called upon to give generously to charity. Welfare agencies and other charities are already working out extensive programs for distribution of Christmas baskets, holiday gifts and toys. In addition, many individuals will give money or gifts in other forms to cheer the hearts of poor families, inmates of institutions and other unfortunate.

The Christmas spirit that prompts such generous activities is said to bring more happiness to the heart of the giver than to those who receive. But this does not mean that the giving should be planned to please the giver with little reference to the effect upon the beneficiary. It is well to call to mind at this time that realization of the greatest good from Christmas charity presupposes its administration with intelligence and care. Indiscriminate giving tends to pauperize or embarrass the recipients and results in duplication and waste.

Individual donors and agencies, if they are actuated by the true Yuletide spirit, they try to coordinate their activities. Working together they are less apt to miss some of the needy or to overdo the thing.

Organized Christmas charity makes it less possible for a man without a decent pair of pants to draw a silk dressing gown in his Christmas basket.

A FANTASTIC PLAN

Construction of an eight-billion dollar 500-foot-wide toll road from coast to coast, as suggested by a New Yorker, would probably provide some relief for idle labor and industry but its contribution to transcontinental motoring would be small, much smaller than it would seem at first.

Such a strip of concrete stretched across the continent would expedite truck and bus traffic and might possibly divert to them much business now carried by the railroads, but it would not be a popular route for the motor tourist out to see the country. The shortest and swiftest line between two points may not be the most interesting and beautiful.

Travelers impelled only the urge to go from here to there with the least expenditure of time and effort would probably choose the faster transcontinental planes or the more comfortable transcontinental trains to a 3,000-mile dash by motor.

This extravagant scheme would have struck a more responsive chord back in the days when the automobile and long-distance touring were still novelties and adventures and drivers were more concerned with getting there and back than with seeing America. The thrill of speed, distance and good roads has worn off and motor tourists are more and more turning away from smooth, crowded highways in search of a little dirt and what little wild scenery the hot-dog era has left untouched.

Give the buses and trucks a 500-foot highway if they need it but leave some winding lanes over the hills, under the trees and through the valleys for the motorist who is fearful of missing some natural or historical wonder.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sick and the world looks puny, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. Skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

"MASQUERADE"

by FAITH BALDWIN

CHAPTER I

She stood at the dressing table in the small hotel room and counted the money Tony had thrust upon her, with hands that shook. She did not glance into the mirror as many women would have done, yet her young face, although blind with fear, deserved the tribute of a personal appraisal.

It was very early in the morning. She had come, alone, to the hotel in Oakland the night before. Tony had told her to go there. "It's quiet, see?" he'd said, "they'll be watching the hotels in San Francisco. Register as—as—Miss Smith." He'd smiled, she remembered incredulously, white teeth flashing in the dark, intent face. "I've made your plane reservations," he went on. "Miss Smith. They'll be watching the big commercial airports, too. This is safer."

He had given her a few terse, terse directions, risen from his chair at the plain deal table, bent over her a moment, kissed her stunned, cold lips into something resembling life and then, "Good-bye, kid," he'd said easily, "happy landings! Watch the Eastern papers for a personal. When I get out of this mess I'll find you again. Don't worry!" From the doorway of that little backroom in the speakeasy he'd waved to her, still sitting there. There was no one else in the room. Tony had seen to that. There, in the doorway, his lips had moved once more making no sound. But she'd thought they had formed the words—"forgive me."

She couldn't forgive him. She couldn't forgive herself.

She counted the money again. Four thousand dollars. Some day she would pay it back. How? When? To whom?

She put the bills in her handbag. Looked, once, briefly, into the mirror, a mechanical gesture. Pulled her small felt hat closer over the broad forehead.

Her skin was satin in texture. It was, amazingly, golden; partly a gift of nature in a benevolent mood, partly a bestowal of the years lived under the hot Hawaiian sun. Against such skin her eyes were as blue as turquoise, her hair heavy, blue black, and her mouth a wound of crimson.

She was a girl at whom the passerby would look twice . . . this "Miss Smith."

She turned from the dresser; walked across the room to the bed and mapped her overnight case shut, picked up a tweed top coat and put it over her arm. She was very plainly, very correctly dressed. Her suit, matching the top coat, was of dark blue, her fine hile stockings, small Oxford, her gloves, smart and serviceable.

She was ready to check out. She went downstairs and asked for her bill. The clerk gave it to her incuriously, accepted the money she handed him and said something conventional and pleasant in farewell. The one uniformed factotum of the hotel took her bag out and called a taxi for her.

On the way to the private flying field she sat well back in the cab, her hat pulled low, her hands twisted together in her lap. Panic rode her like a nightmare; panic greyed the golden skin, whitened the curved red mouth, clouded the eyes of turquoise. Panic was her familiar, her traveling companion, panic ate and walked and slept with her and had done so for these last few hideous days.

A newsboy jumped on the running board as they slowed up in traffic with early editions. "All About the Mystery Woman," he howled, "get your paper—all about the big gang killing. . ."

The cab went onward with a jerk. The newsboy dropped off. Now, "Miss Smith" was perfectly white, white to the lips.

If someone should see her . . . ? recognize her . . . ? as "Tony's girl?"

"Goodbye, kid," he'd said easily, "Happy landings."

She mustn't think of herself. She must think of Tony. Must pray that he get off . . . safe . . . scot-free. No matter what he had done, no matter how mistaken she had been in him—she laughed aloud, thinking of the glib little girl who had come to San Francisco from Hawaii eight short months ago—no matter how things had turned out, he had been good to her after his fashion; had even loved her—after his fashion. And she had loved him, in a thoughtless, thrilled, unthinking sort of way . . . in the way of first love, careless and sweet.

That was all over now. She sat quite still trying to think of all his last directions. She was to go to this flying field. It was owned by a small commercial company. They operated planes for private charter. One had been chartered by a rich man and his family, to make a two-stop flight to New York. At the last minute two of the passengers had been unable to come; one place had quickly been filled; Tony had heard of the final vacancy, in his underground fashion. How Tony heard things, she never knew, never had known. So he had reserved the place, in the name of . . . Miss Smith.

They were at the field now. She got out of the cab and paid her driver. She walked over to the little office. A plane was just landing. Another was tuning up. She looked at it dully. It was, she thought, the one which would take her. Once, oh, a hundred years ago, the prospect of the long flight would have filled her with adventurous rapture. Not now. Just a means to an end. Just an escape. An escape . . . from peering faces, from newspaper headlines, from some stolid faced man, a stranger, handing her a subpoena . . . from men who would try to win from her all her knowledge of Tony, his means of living, his method of business, his whereabouts. . .

Smith's name was crossed off the list. The overnight stops explained to her; the route which would be taken. There was a refreshment stand nearby, a mushroom-like growth. She could have coffee there, the man in the office told her. She refused, forcing a smile. She had had early breakfast at her hotel. Mr. Eames and his party had arrived, she was told. They were waiting for one more passenger "we expect her at any moment now," said the office manager.

The girl left the office, stood for a moment at the barriers to the field. An elderly man, a fat, comfortable woman and a young man stood together, their luggage about them, talking excitedly. It was a very windless, warm day in summer. The sky was without a cloud. The sun shone brilliantly. How could it? thought the girl, standing there alone.

The field was vocal with activity. The plane, in readiness, was of a twin-motored cabin type, carrying eight passengers including pilot mechanic and steward. The girl walked toward it just as the office manager turned from his desk to greet the last arrival who came up in a panting taxi.

Presently . . . The passengers climbed in settling themselves. Mr. Eames arranged his party fussy. The office manager standing on the field made the introductions. Mr. Eames, his wife and son acknowledged the presence of "Miss Smith." They looked conscious that she had only joined the party by a fluke, the failure of their own friends to make the trip. The last passenger was also a woman; a young woman. She climbed in, taking her place beside the solitary girl. She casually looked at her and then smiled suddenly, with obvious delight.

"Why, Fanchon Meredith!" she exclaimed, "who in the world would have thought of seeing you here!"

TWO WRESTLING STARS TO BATTLE AT TRENTON

Two of the outstanding stars in the younger crop of wrestling contenders will collide in a return match to a finish at the Trenton Arena Friday night. They are Sandor Szabo, brilliant Hungarian Adonis and Steve Znosky, Trenton's pride. These two matmen went to a sensational draw a few weeks ago in a time limit bout at the Arena. The match was so hotly contested that Promoter Lew Raymond was urged by public demand to bring them back in a longer bout.

It is not often that members of the youthful brigade meet each other; they are usually pitted against veterans. However, the heavyweight division needs a real house cleaning, and Jack Curley, the mat promoter, under whom Szabo and Znosky perform, believes that he might as well start with the youngsters.

Right now, Szabo stands out as the leading and most popular youthful luminary in the game. But Znosky has been coming along nicely and threatens to take his place. Steve has the right spirit and plenty of courage. He is an aggressive fellow, having learned the art of getting the jump on the other man.

Szabo is being boosted by many as the next champion. He has everything that goes to make a king, with the possible exception of experience. He is smart, powerful and game, and is possessed with a marvelous physique. He has a colorful style, and that his all-around good looks and youthfulness have made him one of the most popular of all wrestlers.

As a rule Sandor wrestles cleanly. He rarely relies on rough stuff. However, this cannot be said of Znosky; the Trentonian often gets wilder than he was on the gridiron for Rider College and brings into play the rough and tumble tactics that are so common now in wrestling. Some fans do not think the Hungarian Adonis will be able to withstand the rough attacks such as Znosky showed at the Arena in his championship match with Jim Lontos last week.

John Supsie, alias Babe Caddock, New England, champion will meet Cyclone Ress, of Germany, in the semi-final finish match.

In a special added time limit contest Sammy Stein, of Newark, will try and put his famous double armlock hold on Don DeLaun, Oklahoman.

In two other time limit engagements Tiger Nelson, of St. Louis, meets George Hagen, U. S. Marine champion, and Norton B. Jackson, N. Y. A. C. star clashes with Gene Bruce, of Finland.

New Serial Story Begins in Courier Today

In America where anything can happen—and usually does—Faith Baldwin lays the scene of her newest serial success; in 1931 America, where the underworld and the upper crust often find their destinies strangely mingled.

Fanchon Meredith, the heroine of "Masquerade" is a girl to whom Fate has given a gangster sweetheart. She has always looked longingly, however, at the world where girls need have no fear of the police, where friends may be trusted and where sweethearts do not walk in the shadow of the gallows.

When the authorities make it so hot for her boy friend that Fanchon is forced to flee the ensuing complications, she goes by air. In the plane she meets just the sort of girl she has always envied—rich, cultured, sure of herself.

Fanchon later staggers from the twisted wreck that had been a great airliner, to confront a great and thrilling opportunity. Why not masquerade as the dead girl—who had been on her way to live with an aunt she'd never seen.

Fanchon grabs her chance, and is swirled into a pulsing adventure where she must watch her "p's" and

"q's" to keep from having her masquerade penetrated. But she loves it. Then gangdom, waiting, inexorable, steps in to take its toll.

High society and the suave, cruel young man who once loved Fanchon play a thrilling game. The stakes are a girl's happiness and honor.

"DREAM TRAVELING"
By Marie Lathrop
Andalusia

High up on a hilltop I travelled with my dreams,
And there I gathered idols, almost real it seems.

In just one fleeting moment I went to foreign shores
Just as quickly I returned to home and common chores.

There's one thing very pleasant about such journey far—
You do not need a penny, nor a super motor car.

And even though you know you're broke in spirit and in purse,
You find yourself a dreaming and it don't make matters worse.

Fast think of all the pleasures you gather as you roam,
And it only takes a second for you to get back home.

Miss Mary Reese, who is a student nurse at the Hahnemann Hospital, was a Sunday dinner guest of Miss Elizabeth Cammons, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Curran, of 531 Linden street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gitz, of Farmingdale, L. I., are the parents of a baby girl, born last night at the Harriman Hospital.

The following girls were recently initiated into membership in the Camp Fire Girls: Viola McAuley, Ruth Jeffries and Nan Townsend.

Frank Crilley, deep-sea diver, who made the trip on the "Nautilus" to the Polar regions a few months ago, will bring his diving suit to the Fathers' Association meeting in the high school this evening. Crilley will give a demonstration of the manner in which the suit is donned.

Drawn from actual photograph made at Mobilgas Research Laboratories, Paulsboro, N. J.

*CLIMATIC-CONTROL is the pre-adjustment of the specifications of Mobilgas so that it automatically adapts itself to the variations in "engine heat," even as high as 400° F., caused by changes in temperature, altitude, humidity and road "pull." In the Mobilgas Research Laboratories, all these changing climatic conditions have been "manufactured" in hot and cold testing-chambers. Here engine tests are conducted day after day. The road performance of Mobilgas is thus scientifically verified at different "engine heats," and its specifications are pre-adjusted before it is placed on sale in your locality.
